PRESENTER DETAILS:

Melanie Dennis has worked as an occupational therapist for eleven years, with the vast majority of this time spent as a community-based occupational therapist in rural settings. She has been working privately in the Fleurieu Peninsula of South Australia for over seven years.

Melanie relies on technology to minimise time spent duplicating, entering and calculating information, as well as improving communication and reducing her reliance on paper. Technology is an essential part of her day-to-day practice, as well as being an area of professional interest. Melanie regularly explores and trials different applications and has high expectations of what information technology will allow in the future of her business. Melanie enjoys sharing her knowledge and experience with others and has given numerous presentations on the use of information technology within her profession.
